

BMO Harris Bank N.A. (the “Bank”) information and disclosure for mutual funds¹

Your account at the Bank may be invested in shares of mutual funds. Some of these mutual funds are related to the Bank because an affiliate of the Bank sponsors, administers, or advises them. This document describes how the Bank manages mutual fund fees to ensure you do not pay twice for transactions.

How these relationships work

Here are our affiliate relationships:

- BMO Asset Management Corp. (“BMO AM”) is the investment adviser to BMO Funds, Inc. and BMO LGM Frontier Markets Equity Fund (collectively, the “BMO Funds”).
- BMO AM and other affiliates of the Bank act as subadvisers to certain BMO Funds, certain Eaton Vance Funds, and certain Columbia Threadneedle Funds (collectively “Proprietary Funds”). The chart below shows these relationships.
- BMO Financial Corp. (“BFC”), the parent company of the Bank and of BMO AM, owns more than 10% of the common shares of Virtus Investment Partners, Inc., the sponsor of the Virtus Funds.

Managing fees where there are multiple relationships

The Bank and its affiliates charge fees for their services to the Proprietary Funds. When you hold these types of investments, you pay these service fees indirectly through ownership in the fund.

When the Bank acts as custodian, investment manager, trustee, executor, conservator, personal representative, or guardian for a non-Retirement account invested in Proprietary Funds or Related Funds, the Bank does not charge Investment Product fees for the Proprietary Funds, so that we do not charge you twice, once directly and once indirectly, for investment services.

You may have a subaccount with an investment adviser who receives fees for managing the subaccount. The investment adviser may be an affiliate of the Bank. The Bank does not charge Investment Product fees for that subaccount, so you are not charged twice for investment services for the subaccount. In addition, the subadviser’s fees for the subaccount will not apply to Proprietary Funds if the subadviser invests in these funds.

Retirement Accounts have different fees and are handled differently, as described below.

How Retirement Accounts work

Retirement Accounts are individual retirement trusts or accounts subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act. When the Bank or its affiliates serve as trustee or investment fiduciary of a Retirement Account, it charges the fees listed in the account’s Fee Schedule.

For Retirement Accounts invested in Proprietary Funds—the Bank pays back (by crediting your account fee) the investment fees that BMO AM or its affiliates charge the BMO Funds, certain Eaton Vance Funds, and certain Columbia Threadneedle Funds.

Other mutual fund fees

The Bank and its affiliates provide additional services to the BMO Funds as listed in this paragraph. BMO AM (and not the BMO Funds) compensates the Bank and its affiliates for the following services: Taplin, Canida & Habacht, LLC (subadviser); Pyrford International Limited (subadviser); and Lloyd George Management (Europe) Limited (subadviser). BMO AM's payments to these affiliates do not increase the aggregate expenses and fees of the BMO Funds. However, the Bank and its affiliates provide services to the BMO Funds as follows, for which they are compensated by the BMO Funds themselves: the Bank (custodian for domestic funds); BMO AM (adviser, administration, and shareholder services); and BMO Investment Distributors, LLC (distributor). These fees are included in the aggregate expenses and fees of the BMO Funds, as shown in the applicable prospectuses for the BMO Funds. Bank affiliates that act as subadvisers to the Eaton Vance Funds and the Columbia Threadneedle Funds are paid by the third party advisers of those Funds.

The enclosed charts show the fees and expenses for mutual funds held by clients' discretionary accounts where a Bank affiliate serves as an adviser or subadviser to the fund for Class I and Premier Class, Class A and Class Y shares of certain BMO Funds. The annual fees collected from non-affiliated mutual funds for 12b-1/distribution, shareholder servicing, recordkeeping, or other miscellaneous services generally range from 0 to 100 basis points (i.e., 0.00 to 1.00 percent of assets per year). Specific information about the fees and expenses of each mutual fund investment is in the applicable mutual fund prospectus.

Mutual funds have financial risks

Investing in mutual funds involves risk, including the possibility of losing your principal. The Bank, BFC, and affiliates of BFC do not endorse or guarantee your mutual fund shares, and these shares are not deposits or debts owed by any of them. Mutual fund shares are not federally insured or guaranteed by the FDIC, the Federal Reserve Board, or any other government agency.
